Caring for Our Veterans – PTSD or Moral Injury?

Moral Injury is a relatively new psycho-social-spiritual model for understanding the dilemmas that returning combat veterans experience. Different from post-traumatic stress disorder, Moral Injury can most accurately be understood as a soul wound, centering on guilt and shame.

Caring for veterans suffering from Moral Injury requires a shift from the medical model of treatment for cure to an exploration of humanist principles for expanding the world view of the veteran.

This program is presented by Rev. Dr. Paul Dordal, nationally board-certified clinical chaplain and Army Veteran of the Iraqi War. He is a Penn Hills resident and a volunteer organizer for Veterans for Peace.
